HIGHGROVE PARTNERS TO CONDUCT KNOWWATER SYMPOSIUM ON FEBRUARY 14, 2008

Atlanta, Georgia (February 13, 2008) – HighGrove Partners will be conducting a KnowWater Symposium for its clients on Thursday, February 14, 2008. The Symposium will feature experts from the water management industry who will discuss how to combat the drought and make informed decisions for the most efficient water use in 2008 and beyond. Attendees will learn about water conservation strategies and the latest irrigation technologies.

Guest speakers include Dr. Becky Champion of the Georgia Environmental Protection Division, Todd Hurt of the UGA Center for Urban Agriculture, and Michael Hurt, CID, CIC, CLIA, CGIA of Clark Irrigation Design & Consulting, Inc.

“We are tremendously excited about kicking off our KnowWater Stewardship Program with this Symposium. We look forward to providing our clients and guests with leading-edge information and tips from top water management experts in the field. Our goal is to help our clients not only pave their way through the current drought, but also to guide them on the most efficient and cost-effective ways to manage their water usage and landscape moving forward,” says Jim McCutcheon, CEO and Partner with HighGrove Partners.

The event will take place from 8:30am to 11:30am at the UGA Alumni Center at the Atlanta Financial Center in Buckhead.
